How Do Globally Engaged U.S. Companies Contribute to Economic Growth in Maine?

Maine’s economy includes 328 companies that operate internationally, competing in global markets on a daily basis for inputs, capital, and customers. These globally engaged U.S. companies serve as a critical engine of economic growth for the state. For instance, they directly contributed $6.4 billion to Maine’s economy in 2011. In addition, these companies indirectly contribute to the state economy by purchasing raw materials, intermediate products, professional services, and other inputs from other local businesses. They also serve as a source of income for workers in local communities, paying on average $56,245 per job in wages, salaries, and fringe benefits in 2011. These payments boost consumer spending and drive additional economic activity throughout the state. Ultimately, all globally engaged U.S. companies directly and indirectly contributed $16.7 billion to Maine’s economy in 2011 — accounting for 34% of the state’s private-sector gross domestic product.

How Can We Sustain and Expand the Contributions of Globally Engaged U.S. Companies?

U.S. companies operate in a highly competitive global marketplace. As cross-border trade and investment have increased, the field of competition has widened in many industries. In this environment, differences in national tax systems can be a significant factor in where companies choose to invest.

Unfortunately, the current U.S. corporate tax system has become an outlier relative to the tax systems of our trading partners. The United States maintains the highest statutory corporate tax rate among OECD countries. In addition, the United States still uses an antiquated system of worldwide taxation, which imposes a second round of taxes on foreign earnings for U.S. companies.

Reforming the U.S. corporate tax system by reducing corporate tax rates and revising international tax rules would make the United States a more attractive location for companies to invest and base their global headquarters, while also encouraging them to return their foreign earnings for investment throughout the United States, including Maine. Ultimately, a more competitive U.S. corporate tax system is critical to sustaining and expanding the contributions that globally engaged U.S. companies make to Maine’s economy, local communities, and working families.
